PROCEEDINGS 1 2 THE COURT: Hello, everybody. MR. HANSEN: Good afternoon, Your Honor. 3 4 MR. DURRER: Good afternoon. 5 THE COURT: Is everybody ready to proceed? 6 MR. DURRER: The debtors are, Your Honor. 7 MR. HANSEN: The committee is as well, Your Honor. THE COURT: Okay. Why don't you go ahead? 8 9 MR. HANSEN: Van, did you want to start, or do you 10 want me to go? 11 MR. DURRER: Yeah, I'll go ahead and start, Kris. 12 That's perfect, and then you can fill in. 13 Judge, this is Van Durrer, Skadden, Arps, Slate,

We appreciate the Court being so prompt with giving us an evidentiary procedures order and being so accommodating with respect to some last minute time shifting and allowing us to give you this, sort of, status update.

Meagher & Flom, on behalf of the debtors.

The good news is it was all very worthwhile. Peace in the valley has broken out with respect to not only the debtors' proposed sale transaction, which is set for a hearing tomorrow afternoon, now at 3 p.m. Eastern, but also with respect to a Chapter 11 plan.

In the coming hours, hopefully as soon as possible, we're going to present Your Honor with a revised form of sale order, asset purchase agreements, and then two additional documents. One or two of the attachments to the asset purchase agreement will pave the way for an administratively solvent case. And then the settlement terms that Chatham and the unsecured creditors' committee and the debtors have worked out with respect to a Chapter 11 plan will also take the form of a stipulation that we'll file with Your Honor. It sort of links to the asset purchase agreement to ensure that the economics that Chatham and the unsecured creditors have agreed, in connection with a plan, aren't lost in the shuffle as the sale transaction proceeds, because I think the sale transaction is obviously going to be on a slightly faster track than the plan.

However, that said, we don't intend for any grass to grow under our fee with respect to the plan. I think we want to promptly get that on file. And I think what we would propose, and we wanted to sort of get some reaction, and Mr. Hansen can speak to this as well, we had solicited a plan prepetition, and that plan contemplated that unsecured creditors would not be solicited but would be deemed to reject the plan.

That is, in large part, the same case with respect to the new plan that's been agreed to. I think the only voter with respect to that plan would be Chatham. And so, while we do intend to provide supplemental information to creditors about that plan, it would not be our aim to have, sort of, a bifurcated disclosure statement phase followed by a confirmation phase. We would at least look to either skip the solicitation page or at least collapse it with confirmation.

And the primary goal, Your Honor, is to save money, because we do have a very tight budget to get an administratively solvent case. We don't want to waste money on things that are, under the circumstances, unnecessary.

So that's my update. Kris, do you want to pick it up from there and add your color and thoughts?

MR. HANSEN: Sure. Thanks, Van. I appreciate it.

Your Honor, again, it's Kris Hansen with Stroock & Stroock &
Lavan, on behalf of the official committee.

So Your Honor, I don't want to be too duplicative, but I did want to give you a bit of a flavor for how we arrived at our settlement and give you a bit of a feel for what the terms look like and so that you can judge Mr. Durrer's request, which we support as well, from a solicitation perspective, in its proper light.

What's interesting about the settlement is everybody worked tirelessly to get there, and everybody winds up getting, effectively, what they want, so to speak. And as any settlement, no one's happy, but everybody recognizes that this was the best of all of our options.

Chatham and Brigade, with their purchasing entity, in essence, get the debtors' support for their sale as well as the committee's support for that sale. The debtors get a plan with all of us having worked hard to come up with a schedule that, at least at the moment, seems to ensure administrative solvency, to the best of the many financial professionals that represent all the different parties' estimates. And those include budgetary caps for certain periods of time that have already been incurred in connection with the case and getting to our anticipated conclusion date. And those caps are self-imposed, in the sense that we've all agreed to them, and we will work within them, and candidly, if we go outside of them, that's at our risk.

And then for the creditors' committee, you know, for general unsecured creditors, we've negotiated basically the creation of a creditor trust into which certain baskets of fairly valuable currency, from our perspective, would get placed. And that includes some cash, that includes the continuing claims against directors and officers, and it includes entitlement to a significant portion of any tax refunds that the debtors/buyer, and all the rest of us, working together, are able to achieve, which we do think are quite material.

And then obviously, in connection with all of this, releases get granted. But those releases have some snapback provisions for failure to support the plan and getting a plan done. The right way to do this, candidly, if we had the luxury of time, and if we had the luxury of unlimited expenses, would be for all of us to work hard, through some type of restructuring support agreement that we would all enter into and then be bound to go going forward. But Mr. Durrer's point is a hundred percent true here; this settlement, in large measure, in terms of getting to the administrative solvency, was born by people stretching in a lot of ways to put these budgetary caps in place and agree that certain fees would be limited, and as a result of that, to take extra time to work through all of this stuff just starts to compound that problem.

So what we have worked on together and what we are hoping to finish off today with additional signature lines is, in essence, a stipulation that would take the place of any type of a much longer form RSA. And ideally, we would have that stip presented as part of the sale order tomorrow that Your Honor could approve in the context of the sale order.

The reason we ask that is because the settlement stip modifies certain terms of the purchase agreement, and they may actually not be in the purchase agreement, and it also dictates the terms, at a high level, of what we need in the plan going forward. And again, this is high level, so it doesn't include the treatment for every single class and the changes, subject to everybody's approval, and all of the rest of the bells and whistles. It's a bit of an RSA -- a huge bit of an RSA-light, if you would, from a way to handle it. But again, from all of our perspective's, using the mediation and the mediator's approval, we feel like we're all working in good faith.

Everyone here is a professional, and we want to make sure that this gets done as quickly as possible.

Ideally, you could approve all of this in some 9019 format, in connection with the sale order tomorrow, or alternatively, so order the stip, but that's something that we feel is necessary to get everybody to continue to move forward and get the docs, from a plan perspective, done and in front of Your Honor with a minimum amount of dispute between the parties and also allow the sale to move to its closing with a minimal amount of dispute between the parties.

And not lost on anybody, of course, is the rocky road that the operations side of the company has had, to this point in time, and the smoothness or approving these types of arrangements that we have amongst each other is also a good message to send to employees and to customers and readers of all of the debtors' newspapers. And this way we hope to help stabilize the business, as we move from here to exit, and obviously in pretty troubled times.

So I know that that's a lot to push at Your Honor, but I know you're aware of it, because you used to be on our side of the bar, of how tough a very large multi-party settlement is to arrive at, especially when you're in a challenged environment and you're trying to cut corners in terms of dollars.

So the committee's perspective is that we also agree that, if there's a way to expedite the plan process that we should do that, because not only will it shorten the time from here to the effective date, which will guarantee less expenses, it will also allow us to save money in connection with an expensive solicitation process. We certainly wouldn't cut corners in terms of notice, to the extent you approve it, and how that notice would be given, but it does save money in terms of solicitation.

So I don't have anything else, Your Honor. You'll see the more defined terms when we get the information to you, but if you had questions for me about the specifics, in terms of dollar amount, regarding all these various buckets that I described for the committee's recovery, I'd be happy to take you through them.

THE COURT: So I assume you'll pay administrative and priority expenses, and then there are certain assets that'll be set aside for unsecured creditors. And from what you're saying, it sounds like Chatham is making some agreement as to whether its second and third liens will or will not share in that, or to what extent they would share.

MR. HANSEN: That's correct, Your Honor. That's exactly right. So in essence, under the settlement, the second and third lien claims would not share at all in the unsecured creditor assets, and the nonsecured creditor assets are largely made up of the claims under the D&O policy, and then entitlement to seventy-seven-and-a-half percent of the amount of the tax refund, and then also some upfront cash with which to pursue those claims. And if they get settled before the pursuit of them starts in earnest, to also distribute the cash as a bit of dollars up front and first dollars off the tax return that comes in later, which is the way that we solved a number of gaps here.

And to satisfy administrative and priority claims we all had to, in essence, stretch. So you have professionals stretching, both in terms of discounts and in terms of caps and the like. And you had the buyers stretch as well, in terms of additional consideration. And that consideration is really more -- it doesn't change the overall facial price. Really what it does is it changes the mechanics in how certain dollars are left behind in the estate because, as you can imagine, buying an operating company has a lot of adjustments, in terms of dollars that come in and dollars that go out, because there's a lot of dollars in the system. And we also have a DIP. So in essence, CAM stretched by putting more cash into the pool. The professionals stretched, the trust stretched, and we all managed to close the gap on the administrative hole to get it to the point where we had administrative claims and priority claims projected to be paid in full.

And you're right that those other buckets of assets go into a creditor trust, and then the second and third lien claims, and first lien -- I don't think there will be any deficiency first lien claims, given that they were credited, but they all do not share in that pool.

THE COURT: And I take it this would resolve all the many causes of action you were seeking permission to pursue?

MR. HANSEN: Some. With respect to the actions against Chatham, yes.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. HANSEN: With respect to actions regarding the directors and officers and other parties that may or may not have aided and abetted in any potential breaches of fiduciary duty there, they would obviously not receive a release. The hope is that we can find a way to settle those claims out before the effective date, but if we can't, those would be assigned over to the trust on the effective date.

And so with respect to the order that was hopefully forthcoming on the STN motion, we would, in essence, hold that in abeyance and have the plan handle the transfer of the authority to pursue those claims. And you'll see, under the settlement stipulation that we're agreeing to, the debtors and the committee both agree that neither of us could settle any of those claims, without the consent of the other, between now and the time we get to the effective date on the plan.

THE COURT: And what about the claims that had to do with whether certain liens of the first lienholders were perfected or reached certain assets? Would there be a settlement of those two?

MR. HANSEN: There is, yes, that's wrapped up in our approval, in essence, of the credit bid associated with the sale. So the credit bid comes in, and those claims are extinguished, so as a result of consenting to the sale, in essence, those claims go away as well.

THE COURT: And then help me, what is that you each would like to do, in terms of the plan process, to expedite it?

MR. HANSEN: Yeah, so I think the way we were thinking about it is that we would allow the second lien claims, effectively, in the amount of a dollar, and then -- which are held by Chatham, and Chatham could then vote those claims in favor of the plan, and we would not -- and that would, in essence, create your impaired consenting class, in terms of approval of the plan. And then we would not solicit votes from the general unsecured creditor class. We would deem them to reject the plan.

And obviously they would still get all the proper notice, but they would be deemed to reject, and we would go to confirmation, on a cramdown basis, and we would basically collapse the times for just basically solicitation of the plan and just try to move ourselves through a combined disclosure statement confirmation hearing at one time. And that would help save both time and money associated with the extensive solicitation process of quite a large body of unsecured creditors.

THE COURT: To the extent that you're settling all of those many claims that you wanted to pursue, you would have to have a motion and some explanation in case anybody wished to object to that, right?

MR. HANSEN: Yeah, that was another question that we wanted to talk to Your Honor about. So yes, I think the idea is that we would be settling those claims largely through a combination of your approval of the sale, so the entry of your sale order tomorrow, and then entry of the confirmation order because we're all a little worried about enforceability of those settlement terms because we're split between two orders and there's a time gap between the two events.

That's why we were hoping to sign this settlement stip, if you will, and then ask Your Honor to approve the settlement stipulation as enforceable among the parties, either as part of the sale order tomorrow or pursuant to some so-ordering process.

We were hopeful to avoid a motion on a 9019 basis on a standalone, again, just because we're trying to avoid additional expense. But we can understand, obviously, if Your Honor wants us to go that route as well.

THE COURT: Yeah, I guess it depends on what exactly

I'm making a final disposition of in this proposed stipulation.

I can understand your desire to minimize notice and expense, but people do deserve some prior notice instead of just having me do it by surprise, right?

MR. HANSEN: Yeah, I think --

MR. DURRER: Yeah, this is Van Durrer.

MR. HANSEN: Go ahead.

MR. DURRER: Yeah, I think a lot of this is going to -- yeah, thank you. I think a lot of this is going to happen under the plan, Your Honor, but obviously the buyer wants to know that the buyer moves on with the assets at a closing under the sale order. And that's very routine.

And no one has objected on the basis of -- well, no one else, I should say, has raised any issues with respect to the sale process in that regard. The only actor that was raising those issues was the unsecured creditors' committee, and the unsecured creditors' committee is satisfied with the overall economics.

And that's why the committee wants at least approval of the terms, as between the parties, to be put in the plan tomorrow. But I wouldn't think of it as a pre-approval of the plan. I would just think that the committee wants to be able to enforce that. Brigade and Chatham have said they will support this plan, if and when it's filed, if and when it's solicited.

Is that fair, Kris, how you think about it?

MR. HANSEN: It is. And I think it's important for everybody, right, like you get our support of the plan terms and CAM and the buyer get our support of the sale, we get to know, from a committee perspective, that everything that everybody's agreed on in that doc is enforceable. So that's right.

THE COURT: And the only part of the settlement then that would be final tomorrow -- everybody would commit to support it, I understand, but the actual claims being released would be the claims about how far the first lien is extended, is that it?

MR. HANSEN: Yeah, I guess, on a final basis, like, we've agreed -- you remember the way that the sale works, in essence, is that it purchases the claims. The buyer purchases certain of those claims and then they subsequently release them. I think we're fine with that regarding the 1L, 2L, 3L with respect to Chatham, but the way you'll see in the settlement is that we have kind of a snapback which is, if they don't support confirmation of the plan, then that release, effectively, is kind of taken back. So it kind of works in a final way under the sale order, but it has a clawback provision which essentially can get pulled back in in the context of a plan. So that's a component of it.

I recognize that it's not crystal clear, Judge, and that it is something that's being thrown at you among another 1 2 pile of terms. But that was important because I think, for Chatham, it wants to know that when it gets its sale order 3 4 entered it can effectively get its release at that time, 5 subject to its good behavior under the rest of the terms of our 6 agreement. 7 MR. DURRER: In addition, Your Honor -- this is Van Durrer -- Your Honor might be thinking, in part, about some of 8 9 the unencumbered assets. The sales terms include fifty million 10 dollars of cash, approximately, on top of the first lien debt. And we're prepared to make a presentation tomorrow, if it's 11 12 important to Your Honor, about how the debtors view that cash relative to those unencumbered assets. 13 14 THE COURT: All right. So as to the claims against 15 Chatham, the claims that didn't just challenge the second and 16 third liens, but the claims that sought money damages, Chatham, 17 in effect, would be buying those, and those would be disposed 18 of tomorrow; is that the proposal? MR. HANSEN: Yes, that's correct. 19 20 MR. DURRER: Yes, Your Honor.

MR. HANSEN: Yep, they'd be purchasing those. Those would be disposed of subject to this snapback, if you will, again, for -- I guess the way to think about it is a traditional restructuring support agreement would have a party support a plan and not oppose it and not support any other plan. And that's, in essence, the structure that we've employed here which is, under the sale order, they receive their release of those claims in the mechanic, which is that they're purchased and then done away with, but that in the event that they don't honor those agreements to support the plan, not oppose the plan and not support any other plan, then the release would come back to life. Effectively, the release would be invalidated and the claims would come back to life, which is how we kind of came up with the construct to ensure that we get where we need to be. No one expects that to happen, but it is a critical piece for Chatham in terms of getting the sale approved tomorrow. THE COURT: And in terms of the settlement that would be embodied in the plan, can you just explain it in the plan that you have, in effect, a combined plan and disclosure statement? MR. HANSEN: Yeah, we absolutely --MR. DURRER: That's fine, Your Honor. MR. HANSEN: Yeah, we can. MR. DURRER: Yeah, we would envision, to keep it simple, Your Honor, sort of a supplement to what's already out

THE COURT: What is already out there? I know that you sought voting early in the case, but I never looked at what there that would articulate exactly what Your Honor's looking for or what Your Honor just suggested.

you did because it never came in front of me. So I'm not --

MR. HANSEN: Yeah, so the original plan contemplated a sale of the company to Chatham. And then there was going to be the -- the new capital structure would have included new debt to replace the existing first lien, second lien debt. That's largely still the case. There was a separate classification for the PBGC. That will all now be collapsed. There'll be one pool of general unsecured creditors. They will be deemed to reject and get the consideration that will be enumerated in the plan supplement.

It used to be stock, cash, and a note for the PBGC.

Now it'll consist of D&O claim proceeds, some cash, and then a large chunk of the anticipated tax refund. And then there'll be that second lien class that will vote for a dollar to be our impaired accepting class. So it's relatively straightforward.

Because of the sale transaction, the first lien debt will all be gone. They'll follow through with the sale. So it's much more simplified.

THE COURT: Well, I may have other questions when I see it, but the one thing that occurs to me is that if we're essentially incorporating a settlement, there has to be, either in the plan or somewhere, some explanation of what it is that's being settled and why everybody thinks that that's the best interest of everybody because, even if people aren't voting, they still have a right to object to the settlement.

MR. HANSEN: Of course. And the good news, Your Honor, is we've had quite a bit of ink spilled, through the STN motion process, on that topic, but we can definitely encapsulate that into a disclosure so that people have an understanding of what's being settled and the reasons why.

THE COURT: And what timing would you be looking to try to accomplish in terms of a plan?

MR. HANSEN: Assuming Your Honor approves the sale tomorrow, the sale is designed to close the first week of September. So it's too much to ask to have this all approved at our next omnibus hearing on August 26th. So we would aim to have something filed in the coming weeks, with a hearing date sometime in the mid to late September, and then we would look to close, as soon thereafter as possible, on a plan effective date.

THE COURT: All right. Have you resolved your other objections to the sale, or are they still going forward?

MR. HANSEN: I believe that the Texas Counties -there's three or four counties that are owed approximately fifty or sixty thousand dollars. I think that that's going forward, Your Honor, and I think there's a handful of cure objections, I believe the majority of which have been resolved, but I think there's still some language floating around on those. But I believe that that's the sum and substance of what's still going forward tomorrow.

1	THE COURT: All right. Thank you for the report.
2	Congratulations on resolving most of your differences.
3	MR. MANNAL: Your Honor, this is Doug Mannal from
4	Kramer Levin. May I be heard?
5	THE COURT: Of course.
6	MR. MANNAL: Your Honor, again, for the record, Doug

8	Your Honor, I think we're just a turn behind the

10	the documents. I think we had a few comments. While we have a
11	business understanding, I'm not sure it's reflected in the
12	documents. But we hope to see those in short order and sign
13	off on them, and we are pleased that the parties have come to a

15	THE COURT: All right. Very good. Anything else for

17	MR. HANSEN: No.
18	MR. DURRER: No, Your Honor.
19	MR. HANSEN: Thank you very much for making the time

23	THE COURT: Thank you for agreeing to change the time
24	tomorrow. I needed to change it for personal reasons.
25	MR. DURRER: No worries, Your Honor. I hope it's
